

ABARES maintains detailed spatial datasets related to Australia's land and forests. These datasets are also available to use or view via spatial web services (also called web mapping services).

Users can interact with spatial web services using:

- Geographic information systems (GIS) software installed on your computer
- Online mapping applications (via a recently updated web browser)

For information about ABARES other data holdings see ABARES latest data releases and the ABARES data catalogue.

About web services

ABARES spatial data, available as web services, are listed below. Web services allow public access to current ABARES spatial datasets without users needing to store the datasets locally. The services are available as ESRI Web Map Services.

Using web services

To use the following Web Services directly you need software which can communicate with the web services, such as ArcGIS or QGIS Geographic Information System software or Google Earth. See the online mapping application section below to use the services without GIS software.

Terms of use

By accessing ABARES Web Services you acknowledge acceptance of Web Services Terms and conditions. Data accessed through ABARES Web Services are subject to a Creative Commons Attribution By 4.0 Licence.

Service notifications

- 17/9/25 4pm to 18/9/25 9am - Scheduled outage to DAFF ESRI enterprise which will affect Land use of Australia services.
- Restored 30 July 2025 - Issue with ABARES services hosted on Digital Atlas Australia has been fixed.
- ABARES Web service addresses have changed. ABARES web services are available from the Digital Atlas of Australia and from ABARES as at 1 July 2025. No services will be available on gis.environment. Please update your applications accordingly.
