

The European Union Cattle Accreditation Scheme (EUCAS) is a national animal production scheme that guarantees full traceability of all animals through the National Livestock Identification System (NLIS), linking individual animal identification to a central database. EUCAS allows Australia to meet the European Union (EU) market requirements for beef by segregating cattle that have never been treated with hormonal growth promotants (HGP) at any time.

EUCAS accredited farms are audited on both a random and targeted basis. EUCAS feedlots and saleyard are audited annually and their ongoing accreditation depends on a successful audit. If a farm, feedlot or saleyard is found not to be complying with the requirements of the scheme the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry reserves the right to revoke their accreditation.
