

Non-prescribed goods have no mandatory export conditions under Australian export laws. To export, you must meet all conditions set by the importing country.

Export Assurance Reform

We are undertaking an ambitious project to modernise the regulatory assurance framework for goods currently classed as non-prescribed goods under the Export Control Act 2020.

This work considers new approaches to regulating food and agricultural goods, strengthening the ways we formally provide trading partners the assurance they require over Australian exports.

We are now engaging with industry to discuss options for managing existing, new, and emerging risks, and how we can put the right controls in place to underpin Australian exports.

Our role

Your importing country may require:

- certificates or other export documents issued by us
- proof that your goods were sourced, prepared and stored in establishments listed with us.

We are only involved if it is a condition set by the importing country.

Importing country requirements

You must meet all importing country requirements for your goods. This applies to everyone involved in the export supply chain.

Before you export:

- check our Manual of Importing Country Requirements \(Micor\)
- talk to your importer and importing country authority.

Exporters

Make sure you understand your responsibilities as an exporter. This includes meeting all importing country requirements.

Export listed establishments

Some importing countries require producers of non-prescribed goods to be export listed. Goods include:

- bee products

- blood and blood products
- edible fats and oils
- health foods
- leather products
- pet food products
- rendered animal products
- skin or hide products.
