

High-quality, comprehensive free trade agreements (FTAs) play an important role in:

- supporting free and open global trade
- enhancing the international competitiveness of Australian exports.

Free trade agreements can cover entire regions with many participants or link just two economies. Under these agreements, parties enter legally binding commitments to open access to each other's markets for goods, services and investment.

Our agreements

Australia has 19 free trade agreements currently in force.

These include bilateral agreements with:

- Chile
- China
- Hong Kong
- India
- Indonesia
- Japan
- Korea
- Malaysia
- New Zealand
- Peru
- Singapore
- Thailand
- the United Arab Emirates
- the United Kingdom
- the United States

These also include 4 plurilateral agreements:

- the ASEAN-Australia-New Zealand Free Trade Area (AANZFTA)
- the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP)
- the Pacific Agreement on Closer Economic Relations (PACER) Plus
- the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP).

Learn more about free trade agreements in force.

Signed or concluded but not yet in force

Free trade agreements signed or concluded but not yet in force:

- Australia-European Union Free Trade Agreement

Learn more about free trade agreements signed or concluded but not yet in force.

Under negotiation

Free trade agreements currently under negotiation include:

- Australia-India Comprehensive Economic Cooperation Agreement

Learn more about free trade agreements under negotiation.

Benefits

The Australian Government supports the negotiation of comprehensive free trade agreements that are:

- consistent with the World Trade Organization (WTO) rules and guidelines
- reinforce the multilateral trading system.

Free trade agreements promote stronger trade and commercial ties between participating countries.

They also open up opportunities for Australian exporters and investors to expand their business into key markets. There is particular benefit when they remove barriers in highly protected markets or enable Australian exporters to gain a foothold in new or expanding markets.

By facilitating access to these markets, free trade agreements provide significant commercial benefits to Australia's exporters and in turn, wider economic benefits to all Australians.

Our role

The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT) leads and coordinates free trade agreement negotiations on behalf of the Australian Government.

We work closely with DFAT to ensure the interests of agriculture industries are strongly represented in the development of Australian negotiating positions.

We also work together to consult industry on identifying market access priorities and defensive interests, and to keep industry informed of the government's approach to the negotiations.

We are responsible for biosecurity and food safety measures, and play a leading role in developing:

- the sanitary and phytosanitary (SPS) provisions of free trade agreements
- broader provisions impacting agriculture market access, agriculture tariffs, Non-Tariff Measures and sustainable agri-food systems.

Source: <https://www.agriculture.gov.au/biosecurity-trade/market-access-trade/fta>