

The Australian agricultural sector is at the forefront of climate change impacts and opportunities.

Our farmers work under some of the harshest environments and most variable climates on earth. As the climate continues to change and extreme weather events become more frequent and intense, a shared commitment across governments to pursue a climate change response, underpinned by climate-smart practices, is paramount.

We all have a role to play in our climate response, including helping Australia transition to a net zero economy.

Source: <https://www.agriculture.gov.au/about/news/national-statement-climate-agriculture>