

The Freedom of Information Act 1982 (FOI Act) gives you a legal right to request access to documents held by the government.

What you can request

You can request access to any document in the possession of:

- us (the department)
- certain agencies, such as portfolio Ministers.

We can refuse access to some documents, or parts of documents that are exempt. Exempt documents may include those relating to national security, documents containing material obtained in confidence and Cabinet documents, or other matters set out in the FOI Act.

Publicly available documents

Before making a request, check what is already publicly available:

- Information Publication Scheme
- FOI disclosure logs
- corporate information on this website
- any other information on this website

How to make a request

You can submit an FOI request to us by either emailing foi@aff.gov.au or completing our online request form.

All FOI requests must:

- be in writing
- state the request is an application for the purposes of the FOI Act
- provide information about the document(s) you want to access
- provide an address for reply
- state which agency your request is about.

We may ask you for further information if we don't know which documents you want to access.

Personal details

You don't have to give us your real name, or any name at all, or provide proof of your identity. We do need this to give you access to:

- your own personal information or documents about your business affairs
- information on behalf of another person with their consent.
