

Australia's Commonwealth, state and territory governments manage fisheries in consultation with the fishing industry, scientists, economists and other user groups. This includes those that represent traditional fishing, recreational fishing and environmental non-government organisations.

These management processes implement controls, such as limits on catch or effort levels, and regulations of fishing methods to manage Australia's fisheries in a sustainable way.

Source: <https://www.agriculture.gov.au/agriculture-land/fisheries>